

Cornell University
College of Human Ecology

Is Human Ecology right for you?

Determining if a college or university is the right fit is critical to your search.

As you consider the College of Human Ecology, we hope the following will help you reflect on your interests, the educational environment that appeals to you, and who you are as a person and a scholar.

Does the following resonate with you?

Outwardly focused. Inwardly motivated.

College of Human Ecology students are active learners who connect their interests, education, experiences, and aspirations to the greater context of communities through research and engagement. Our students value analytical and critical thinking, creative-problem solving, and the ability to employ multiple perspectives.

Do you...

- have a deep interest in the world around you and hope to better understand your place in it;
- want to use your education to impact people's lives;
- want to make a meaningful contribution through work you value?

Are you...

- looking for an education where interests are informed by a sense of purpose;
- ready to consider the questions that shape our everyday circumstances;
- interested in taking initiative and finding creative ways to get things done effectively and efficiently?

We hope you are beginning to see the possibilities of a Human Ecology experience and invite you to explore the next steps.

- Get to know us through our website, viewbook, and fact sheets.
- Visit campus and attend a freshmen focused Human Ecology information session (May through October) or schedule a transfer phone or in-person advising appointment.
- Contact humec_admissions@cornell.edu with questions for our Admissions Staff.
- Connect with a Human Ecology Ambassador by emailing heambassadors@cornell.edu.