“People guess that I must have studied economics or finance, but I majored in Human Development. Training in the fundamentals of psychology, sociology, research and analysis prepared me for my career by putting people at the center of any equation. And the learning environment in Human Ecology inspired me. It was dynamic, collaborative, and focused on making a difference in people’s lives. Career preparation. Informed, involved citizenship. That’s Human Ecology.”

Joy Boatwright, Class of ’92
Position: Senior Financial Advisor, Merrill Lynch Cornell: Human Development

i am a financial advisor.
human ecology

Cornell University College of Human Ecology

learn more about the College of Human Ecology at www.human.cornell.edu