Food Choice Capacity
A framework describing food choice capacity as the way people feel about their ability to meet their standards in food and eating given their circumstances and food management skills. Life course events and experiences shape these factors and processes over time.