Food Choice Process Model

A grounded theory model portraying the many factors and processes shaping a person’s thoughts, feelings, and actions related to food and eating. Based on life course events and experiences and in the context of many types of influences, a person constructs a personal food system (cognitive processes to guide behaviors). Behaviors also shape the personal food system as well as the influences and the person’s life course.